"HIGH LIFE" AND JEALOUSY LEAD TO TRAGEDY; MISS MILDRED HANAN SHOT; WOMAN KILLS SELF

Kills Husband By Throwing Acid In Face

AKRON, Ohio, Sept. 23.—Mrs. Mildred Hanan, 42, was in Peoples hospital today suffering from a nervous collapse following her sensational confession last night to the throwing of acid into the face of her husband, John R. Hanan, Akron business man, who died from inhaling the poisonous fumes.

A charge of murder was entered against her on the police court docket and Prosecutor A. W. Doyle today was preparing for her arraignment as soon as doctors permitted her to be taken from the hospital.

Mrs. Hanan, arrested in her room at home following the funeral services over her husband's body yesterday afternoon, broke down under questioning last night and shrieked, "Yes, I threw it."

"Oh, God—I didn't mean to kill him. I didn't want to kill him," she moaned and then fell in a faint on the floor.

In an adjoining room her four children heard the screams which marked the confession. Three of them had refused to believe their mother was guilty. The fourth, Harry, aged 20 years, smiled grimly.

"Don't blame my mother for cutting the telephone wires and locking the door of my room," he told officers following the confession. "I did that. But I never would have told, no matter how much I might have been tortured."

A home made mulligan through her husband's attention to other women was the cause of her act, Mrs. Hanan confessed.

"We had quarreled after we returned home last Saturday night," she added. "I did not sleep the rest of the night."

The acid was thrown upon her husband's face early Sunday morning. Mrs. Hanan had been suspected from the first, though her efforts to make it look as though the acid had been thrown by a burglar. Her story of her son taking in his room, the telephone wires cut and the intruder hiding in the closet from evening until the early hours of the morning did not agree with the finding of police investigators. Her attempt to make police believe she had been a victim of a burglar, however, failed when it was found the marks on the pillows did not agree with her story.

New Movie Death Mystery

New York authorities have started inquiry into the death of Miss Zella Crosby, beautiful motion picture continuity writer. Miss Crosby's death was caused by poison at first believed to have been taken accidentally. Now it is said there is reason to believe the young woman's death was not accidental. Police have been told that there was a party at Miss Crosby's studio shortly before her death and are searching for letters said to have a bearing on the case.

BRUISES FOUND ON THE BODY OF MISS RAPPE

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., Sept. 23.—The spotlight of testimony again today turned toward the tragedy of Virginia Rappe, the actress, to determine whether or not she was the victim of a crime or on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the girl's death. It is charged Miss Rappe suffered fatal injury from a drunken party at the hotel St. Francis here September 5, last.

Arbuckle this afternoon was to be brought from jail, where he is held without bail, to a police court for continuation of his preliminary hearing, which will decide whether he shall be held to answer to the superior court on the murder charge sworn against him by another guest at the party, Mrs. B. M. Delmont, or a grand jury indictment already returned which accuses him of manslaughter.

The first session of Arbuckle's preliminary hearing, held late yesterday, was adjourned without his attorneys having asked a question in cross-examination or giving any indication of what their plans for his defense might be.

Attaches of the district attorney's office said they had expected the defense to occupy considerable time in cross-examination and had no other witnesses ready to put on the stand before today.

The testimony of the three prosecution witnesses already before the court, a nurse and two doctors, was that they observed bruises on Miss Rappe's arms and body. The two doctors said death was due to ruptured bladder and that the organ was probably injured by external force.

Dr. Shelby Strange, who performed the autopsy on the body of Miss Rappe, said he found bruises on her right arm and that on the left arm was a scar which might have been caused by a hypodermic needle.

Great crowds attended yesterday's court session and police guarded aisles adjacent to the court room. Spectators were in the main women, the hearing being held in Judge Sylvain Lazarus's women's court and authorities ruling that women should have the preference over men in securing admittance.

Many of the women spectators were on hand yesterday five minutes before the hearing opened and several brought basket lunches.

Today's session of court was announced to begin at 2 p. m.

What's The Matter With Us, Anyway?

WALTER C. TEAGLE, PRESIDENT OF THE STANDARD OIL CO. OF NEW JERSEY, GIVES THE TIMES THE ANSWER.

BY WALTER C. TEAGLE
President, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey

I WAS a little surprised to learn from your question that there is such a difference of opinion among authorities as to the real cause of unemployment and business depression.

Not being an authority on economic conditions, perhaps I am wrong in considering only the obvious reason for the contraction suffered in nearly every line of trade.

I cannot call any financial wizardry to my aid, nor coin any epigrams to make the present business situation appear the result of mysterious or hidden causes.

To me it resolves itself into nothing more nor less than the cumulative effect following a period of financial and commercial excesses. There may be any number of contributing causes, but they are the kind

DEAD WOMAN WROTE SHE COULDN'T STAND SORDID TINSEL LIFE ANY LONGER

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., Sept. 23.—Mrs. M. E. Dittmar, of San Francisco, told newspaper men today that she was the sister of Mrs. Hanan, and that jealousy was not the motive for the shooting.

Haunus. Send them home to my mother, please."

After adding that she had sent the "ruby ring to John Borland," the letter added:

"I drew almost all my money out of Harriman National Bank. Did have $800 in my purse."

Miss Hanan Describes Shooting

Questioned at the hospital by detectives, Miss Hanan declined to say what had led up to the shooting, but gave the following description of the affair:

"Mr. John Borland, a Dartmouth University graduate, and engaged in the import and export business here, Miss Dorothy Gottschalk, Brooklyn, and I had dined at my home last night. At 11 p. m. we arrived in my automobile at Miss Gottschalk's home."

"We remained in Miss Gottschalk's apartments for two hours, during which time we discussed the general topics of the day. Mr. Borland spoke of looking for apartments in Brooklyn, and his business affairs."

"We had just emerged from the vestibule when I saw Mrs. Lawes step from an arway on the left of the entrance. The next thing I heard was three pistol reports. I dropped to the sidewalk and when I got up saw blood running from my arm."

"I ran for a hundred feet and collapsed. I then heard another shot fired. Mr. Borland picked me up and carried me to the steps of a house on Schermerhorn street. A policeman came running up. Mr. Borland asked him to get an ambulance. I was brought up to this hospital and that is all I can remember."

Blood Transfusion Necessary

In an effort to save Miss Hanan's life, a blood transfusion was made. Dr. Harvey Fish was the donor. Assembled at the hospital were Borland and the girl's mother and brother.

In their endeavor to determine whether Mrs. Lawes was a drug addict, the police showed interest in an incident preceding the shooting described by a woman neighbor of Miss Gottschalk's. This woman, who was looking out of a window, said she saw Mrs. Lawes sit down on a doorstep, raise a cup to her lips and then dash it into the street. Detectives found the china fragments and later in Mrs. Lawes' bag an empty drug bottle.

Miss Hanan is 24 years old, while Mrs. Lawes was 32. The younger

Order Peace Treaties Favorably Reported

BRITISH DOMINIONS WILL NOT BE REPRESENTED AT DISARMAMENT MEET

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 23.—Favorable report on the peace treaties between the United States and Germany, Austria and Hungary was ordered today by the senate foreign relations committee.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, leader of the fight against the treaty of Versailles was the only member to vote against reporting the treaties.

Before reporting the three parts the committee adopted a reservation requiring that congress pass an act for appointment of an American representative on allied commissions by the president with the advice and consent of the senate.

Another reservation adopted by the committee, presented by Senator Pommeroy, Democrat, Ohio, provided that protection given the United States government in its property in this should also apply to American nationals.

The vote on reporting the treaties favorably was nine to one, the supporters of the treaties including six Republicans and three Democrats, all the members present, except Senator Borah, who cast the sole negative vote. The Democrats were Senators Swann, of Ohio, and Shields, of Tennessee.

Senator Johnson, of California, who was allied with Senator Borah in the fight against the Versailles treaty, was said to have discredited with Senator Borah's contentions that the treaties were likely to involve this nation in European affairs. Senator Shields also was one of the "irreconcilables" of the Versailles treaty controversy who today supported the new treaties.

Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, ranking Democrat on the committee, was not present today, but has heretofore expressed himself as favoring the treaties.

ROME GETS COLD SPELL

ROME, September 23.—(By the Associated Press)—From depressing heat Rome has suddenly been transformed into a city of shivering cold. A cloud burst occurred yesterday accompanied by a storm of hail, which covered the streets in some places six inches deep.

In the poorest quarter many houses are surrounded with water and the residents imprisoned. Several children are reported to have been drowned.

Labor To Stage Disarmament Demonstration

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Labor organizations in Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan were asked to join in "world wide demonstrations for disarmament" on armistice day when the disarmament conference assemblies, in cablegrams sent out today by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The demonstrations by organized labor in various countries would be held in conjunction with that planned by organized labor in the United States.

The cablegram sent to C. W. Bowser, chairman of the parliamentary committee of the British Trade Union Congress, with which the other cablegrams practically are identical, follows:

"American Federation of Labor while heartily for fullest possible disarmament in interest of international peace and good will, feels it possible to have demonstrations of English people in support of this humanitarian purpose with a view of having them prevail upon the British government as we are trying to prevail upon ours and all others to insist upon the fullest limit of disarmament at Washington conference."

Mr. Gompers also sent out a call to "secure central labor union" urging widespread support and participation in the armistice day demonstrations.

Food Prices Up; Farm Products Drop

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 23.—Although the retail prices of food increased in Ohio during August, according to government statistics, the prices of farm products are still falling, reports received by C. J. West, state-federal agricultural statistician for Ohio, show.

Wheat has advanced five cents a bushel, eggs three cents a dozen and calves one cent a pound, but aside from these there has been a decrease or no change in all farm products.

Incidentally, the victory evened up the series, one all with the final and decisive battle yet to be fought.

Says Railroads Were Not Given Funds When Needed

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 23.—Railroads have been given sufficient revenues when they needed it, the 40 per cent increase in freight rates ordered by the interstate commerce commission last year never would have been heard of, H. R. Lewis, freight traffic manager of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Cincinnati told members of the state public utilities commission today at the rate investigation on farm products.

Mr. Lewis said a ten per cent increase should have been given the carriers in 1914 and that a five per cent increase would have been welcomed back in 1917. At this juncture Commerce Commissioner Marshall asked Mr. Lewis if he knew what dividends were paid by the trunk line carriers up until 1918. Lewis said he did not know.

According to Mr. Lewis, the present freight rates are not retarding industry. He said he had answers from many shippers to this specific question, and in almost every instance the shippers asserted present freight rates have nothing to do with lack of business.

Mr. E. Deane, traffic manager for the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, asserted there is at present no need for a basis on which grain rates are computed by the carriers and that he is going to ask the carriers that a reference be held to establish such a basis.

From Mr. Lewis it was developed that carriers had proposed a tentative rate reduction on sugar beets ranging from five to 20 per cent on less than 25 mile hauls and an increase of one cent a ton on distances over 25 miles, but that this proposed rate had been rejected by the sugar beet interests who want both the 25 and 40 per cent rate increase removed.

POWERS SEEK MORE DEFINITE INFORMATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Inquiries as to the meaning of the section relating to "new agencies of warfare" in the program suggested by Secretary Hughes for the armament conference has been made by at least two of the invited governments.

While none of the governments has manifested dissatisfaction with the list of topics suggested it was learned today that there have been requests for somewhat more definite information regarding certain suggestions among them that relating to commitments. In response, the United States government has advised the inquiring powers of its conception of the subject, but it is understood has reiterated that it has no desire to limit unnecessarily the scope of the conference by hard and fast rules and that so far as possible it is considered advisable that the program be left in an elastic form.

Although no official indication has been given it is believed that the submarine will take first place in the discussion of the topic entitled "new agencies of warfare."

It also appears certain that a discussion of chemical warfare will be an important feature of the conference. The policy of the United States government towards such means of warfare has been clearly indicated as favoring its use only when forced to do so by the enemy's employment of similar methods.

Price Ready To Fight Klan

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—That Attorney General Price is ready and willing to co-operate with federal and local authorities in suppressing the Ku Klux Klan in Ohio was said to be indicated in an answer to the clerk of the city council of Youngstown acknowledging receipt of resolutions denouncing the organization, recently passed by council.

"I have read the resolutions with much interest and will give the matter referred to in it full consideration," the attorney general said.

A Sure Reminder.

Perhaps the most original suggestion for a "reminder" was that of the little boy whose grandmother had forgotten his birthday present the year before. She wished to know what she could do in order that she should not forget it again. "You might put your teeth in upside down," said the boy.

Good Roads Association Is Formed At Ripley

A meeting of Ripley business men was held Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing the Ripley branch of the Ohio Valley Good Roads Association, which is to cover the three river counties of Adams, Brown and Clermont—known as the A. B. C. District between Cincinnati and Portsmouth. The object of the association is to promote the building of good roads through the counties, and particularly the location and construction of the Atlantic-Pacific Highway along the north bank of the Ohio River, its best and natural low-grade route between the two cities stated, and of surpassing scenic beauty. This highway has already been located to Cincinnati.

The meeting was well attended, filled with an overflow on the stage outside. Great interest and enthusiasm were shown by all. Mr. Edward L. Campbell, Vice President of the Association for Brown County was the principal speaker, and briefly explained its objects. After a social and hearty exchange of sentiments, the Ripley Branch was rapidly organized as follows:

W. H. Bristow—Pres.
Dr. R. T. Price—V. Pres.
A. J. Stivers—Secretary.

Williams, Cashier of the Citizens Bank, who has been a faithful worker in the cause of good roads. The Higginsport branch was then organized, with good old Col. Mike Shinkle as president.—Ripley Bee.

OIL LIGHT BEATS ELECTRIC OR GAS

Burns 94 Per Cent Air

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe, burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene (road-oil).

The inventor D. R. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Advertisement.

POLICE OFFICER TELLS INTERESTING STORY

Made Three Trips to Hot Springs But Still Was Unsuccessful in Quest. Finally Returned Home and After All Else Failed He Found Nerv-Worth Gave the Long-Desired Relief From His Troubles

"I can now go on feeling like a new man," said Clyde E. Vittor, of Morgan town, W. Va., police force. "One bottle of Nerv-Worth did me more good than three trips to Hot Springs. I had been bothered with stomach trouble for about eight years. My food didn't digest properly and I was constantly bothered with gas forming on my stomach. I took treatment at Jacksonville, Fla., and at Hot Springs, but got only slight relief. I was forced to lay off on account of my condition. I couldn't sleep nights, my stomach pained me constantly and nothing that I ate would agree with me. I took several preparations but got no relief, so finally I tried Nerv-Worth and the first bottle did me more good than the three trips to Hot Springs. My stomach no longer bothers me and I sleep like a log. I can and do recommend Nerv-Worth highly and hope that it helps others as it has helped me."

Thousands of cases like this have found that Nerv-Worth gave the desired relief in stomach and nervous afflictions is really remarkable. For years it has been doing the work wherever sold and thousands of satisfied users from all parts of the country have vouched for its merit. Many have rightly termed it "The Miracle Medicine," and the results it gives in many cases is quite often miraculous. It acts in a sensible way, overcomes the troubles and gives pleasing and lasting relief. It neutralizes poisonous gas-forming acids in the stomach. It drives out impurities, makes for proper assimilation, thus aiding nutrition. It whets the appetite and tones the whole digestive system. At the same time it has tonic action. It gives nerve force, aids in overcoming nervousness, tones and invigorates the whole system. It contains no narcotics, coal tar products or nauseating oils.

Veteran Engineer Will Make His Farewell Run Saturday

John F. "Baldy" Haynes, one of the best known engineers on the Norfolk and Western, will give up the throttle tomorrow after 47 years' service in the cab of N. & W. engines. On his last trip on No. 3 passenger train for Columbus tomorrow morning he will have his old favorite sled, No. 578. The engine is being decorated today by N. & W. employees at the local roundhouse. On his arrival in Columbus, moving pictures will be taken of Haynes and his decorated iron steed.

Mr. Haynes will be 70 years of age tomorrow and arule of the railroad company that an engineer must retire at the age of 70 makes it necessary for "Baldy" to leave the road and retire to his home in Columbus on a pension as a reward for faithful services.

Other surprises have been planned for Mr. Haynes on this last trip with local N. & W. friends taking an active part.

Noted Artists Coming Under Auspices Of Ladies' Musicales; Tickets Are Offered

An announcement of great interest to the music lovers of Portsmouth is being made today by the Ladies' Musicales relative to the two concerts of the Artists' Course, which will be given this fall.

The first artist to be heard will be the baritone, Reinhold Werrenrath, on Nov. 21st, and the others will be Efraim Zibonist, violinist, and Muriel Yolanda Mero, pianist, who will appear Dec. 12th. The concerts this year will be given in the Columbia Theatre. The mere mention of the names of these artists to those in touch with the music life of America is sufficient to arouse delight at the prospect of their appearance, and praise for the committee who arranged for them.

The organization this year has arranged for course tickets of two kinds, one at $4.50 and the other at $2.50. The $4.50 tickets are for permanent reserved seats and possessors of same will be given the privilege of expressing their preference for location through the mail. These preferences will be filled in the order of their receipt. Seats for both concerts will then be awarded at or near the desired location, and returned via mail, thus insuring a seat where desired and saving the time and trouble of having to make selections after tickets are purchased. The 500 tickets will be re-

The Ladies' Musicales have been very fortunate in arranging with Mr. Foster Krake, who directed Portsmouth's First Community Song Recital last May in direct community music for this year, and develop musical interests of Portsmouth. He will also direct the voice of the Ladies' Musicales. Mr. Krake has opened a studio over the Chamber of Commerce, and may be seen there regarding matters of community musical interest.

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—Will you please print in your column what the laws are on marriage between relatives, and if there is a law in Ohio that prohibits marriage of cousins, and if so, in what states in which it is not prohibited.

THANK YOU.
Marriage between first cousins is prohibited in Ohio and most of the other states. I don't know of any place where you could get married.

Dear Dolly—I want to know who to go to make my husband take care of his children. He works every day and will not buy a moment for his children. I stayed with him as long as I could and then I had to go to my parents. When I would ask him to go to work and provide for myself, I tried to get something for myself and the children to eat he would tell me to go to work and provide for myself. I tried to get work, but my baby is too young to leave at home. He goes to the restaurant and gets his meals. Who shall I go to make him take care of his family.

WORRIED MOTHER.
Go to Probate Judge Gilliland at the Court house. Your husband ought to be housewhipped and then sent to jail.

A WIFE IN THE MAKING BY PHYLLIS PHILLIPS

A BRIGHTER OUTLOOK
It was a bright-eyed Cherry that went off to work the next morning. She felt like a girl brimming over with the joy of life, hope and something, some secret way down within her, which caused her to break into dreamy smiles every now and then. Her heart sang a psalm of joy and the absent Ned was uppermost in her mind all day.

The world, life, love and happiness were hers for the waiting, for the asking, and above all, for the making.

When Arthur Hamden came forward to greet her she fairly beamed at him, knowing full well that she had no fear of herself, nor any reason for not being perfectly glad to see him. Arthur was a good friend, but time would adjust all those things.

As her needle flew to the accompaniment of her happy thoughts, Cherry hummed a little song to herself and planned her first dinner party in the group-house. There would be no disturbing elements present there, Ned and she would be the proudest pair in Wellshire.

Both Withers dropped in to see her at lunch time, and Cherry and she walked back to the Withers house and had a cozy lunch together, over which they settled many vexing questions.

"I really believe that Dick begins to love a little," Beth announced as she hoped herself to some appreciating friend. "He sees that I mean business this time, and am through with letting him twist my thoughts, as well as curb my very destiny for me. I can't know what would have happened to some of us if you had not come along when you did, darling."

"Beth, you flatter me. With that good brain of yours and your great love for Dick things would have turned out as you wanted them, anyway. It's the battles we fight alone and the decisions that we make for ourselves that are the worthwhile ones in life. And the ones that bring results. Never forget this, Beth. And Cherry smiled her dreamy smile.

"Maybe, maybe, but you have given many of us faith in ourselves, and that's half the battle. With faith one can plan and win. So there, Miss."

Miss Chene (Mrs. Silas, Mrs. Jack Casey and Mrs. Sidney Hart) were appointed a nominating committee for officers to be elected at the next meeting. Mrs. George Erwin gave reading. Mrs. H. H. Jenkins and Mrs. Tramm were visitors. During the social hour Mrs. J. C. Chandler assisted Mrs. Gilliland in serving a dainty refreshment course.

WHAT'S THE MATTER

of troubles that we always have with us, even in times of greatest prosperity.

Cost of the War
The lowest authoritative estimate that I have seen of the actual money cost of the war—that is, the direct tangible loss outside of the fearful toll of human lives—is 176 billion dollars. I believe that eminent economists estimate the direct and indirect costs to date at more than 255 billions of dollars. A large part of that represents actual wealth forever destroyed.

With the world just emerging from the greatest calamity in history, it is not so remarkable that there has been a period of all kinds of business, financial and labor troubles, conflicting to what we call a demoralized state that we have done so well in meeting our troubles and working towards normal prices and normal living.

A small boy and a hammer can make a perfect machine, representing months of work by skilled artists, worth less in five minutes. The work of half a century had gone into the system of domestic and international trade which was disrupted overnight by the war. Business friendships of long standing were broken.

It is not necessary to review the train of evils that followed the withdrawal of millions of men from productive pursuits for the purpose of war. Wage scales were advanced, and efficiency suffered, people coming from economy to extravagance, and many other evils quickly developed.

Painful Return
The contraction necessary to a return to a sane life is, of course, painful. It is not easy to return to the simple life abandoned under the heavy, leading influence of sudden and abnormal prosperity.

Nevertheless, it seems to me that we have made progress toward sane and normal conditions and I hope we have passed through the worst of the adjustment trials. There must be a still further reduction in costs of manufacture and distribution and in all living costs.

I see no reason to expect an immediate return to what we regard as prosperity in this country, but our gain will be greater if we work out our salvation slowly, giving time to make the readjustment more nearly uniform in all lines of activity.

woman according to the police, had been married to Jerome Wagner, of this city, but a divorce had been granted about three years ago.

Jealousy Blamed For Tragedy
Borland, a graduate of Dartmouth College, was questioned for several hours by Assistant District Attorney Wilson, and detectives. Although admitting that he liked Miss Hansen very much, he denied that they were engaged.

The police said that the two women had been almost inseparable for four years. They expressed the belief, however, that Mrs. Lawes had become so incensed by Miss Hansen's acceptance of social invitations from Borland that her mind had become affected. Miss Gottschalk told the police that Mrs. Lawes had been in love with Borland and had been extremely jealous.

The police announced an examination of Mrs. Lawes' stomach would be made today to determine if she had been a drug addict.

Denies Relationship
SAN FRANCISCO, September 22.—Mrs. M. E. Dittmars, said to be the mother of Mrs. Grace Lawes, who ended her life this morning in New York, after shooting Miss Mildred Hansen, denied such relationship when questioned by a newspaper representative at her home today. She cut short the interview by closing the front door in his face.

Mrs. Dittmars heard the name and lives at the address noted on the farewell letter found in Mrs. Lawes' hand bag. She is also the only Mrs. M. E. Dittmars in San Francisco, according to all available directories.

The representative of another afternoon paper was told by neighbors of Mrs. Dittmars that she had quickly picked her belongings after being notified of the New York tragedy and departed for a secret address.

BRITISH DOMINION

The United States and the British Empire. It is significantly recalled here that the whole party is the direct sequel of the Imperial Dominion conference when the opposition to the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance developed on the part of the British Dominions coincidentally with the expressions of the American press against the continuation of that pact.

Canada's Western Commissioner, The first cable dispatches from London would seem to indicate that not a single representative of the British Dominions will be on the British delegations. This has occasioned much disappointment here. At first it was supposed that this may be due to a hastening on the part of British representatives to their own countries to discuss foreign affairs with other powers, but the important part taken by General Smuts of South Africa in the Paris conference as well as the success of the British Government in securing representation in the Assembly of the League of Nations for its dominions would seem to offset that impression. For a number of days has been active on the part of the Canadian people for a commissioner in Washington. In principle this plan has met with approval here but while the British Government might not object to a Canadian commissioner in Washington, would they approve of an American commissioner in Ottawa? Although there is no parallel between the importance of Egypt over which England maintains a protectorate on the one hand and Canada on the other, it is a fact that any American commissioner possessing virtually diplomatic powers has been a resident at Cairo for years. The whole problem is one of the delicate politics of the United States, and it is hard to see how it had been expected that would be settled before the big conference.

May Increase Delegation
Meanwhile speculation is developing as to who the additional two members of the United States delegation will be. The members present at the London conference with the president to complete the conference and is not known as a result of Delegation. His name is being mentioned separately as a probable choice. President Lansing's Secretary of State is another possibility but he is not the although it is possible that he has been requested to serve as the Republican member of the Delegation. PEACE TREATIES lives on allied commissions was similar to number seven of the original Lodge reservations to the Versailles pact. The new reservation was drafted by Senator Lodge with incorporation of suggestions by Senators Johnson and Brandegee.

Senator Johnson insisted that the reservation should include "participation as well as representation."

The resolutions of ratification and reservations as adopted for the Austrian and Hungarian treaties were similar.

The Pomerene reservation was to Article 1 of the German treaty, relating to protection of American property rights as provided in the Knox peace resolution and declared that "the words United States shall be construed to include the United States and its nationals." This reservation also accompanies the Austrian and Hungarian pacts.

Senator Borah indicated that he would carry his fight against ratification to the senate floor where debate is expected to begin within a few days. The committee voted to have the treaties considered in open session.

Quizz Suspect In Murder

DOWAGIAC, MICH., September 22.—Efforts of Cass county authorities to solve the mystery of the murder of William Monroe, his wife and 15-year-old daughter Sven, centered today on questioning of William Kinney, a former resident of Dowagiac, who was arrested on his farm near Temple, Mich., yesterday and brought here by Sheriff Sherman P. Wyman.

Kinney's detention, the sheriff stated, was prompted by a report that he had been warned by Monroe to discontinue his attentions to Sven prior to removal of the Kinney family to Temple a year ago. The sheriff added he had been told Kinney was in Dowagiac last Saturday, the day the Monroes are supposed to have been killed.

When arrested, Kinney disclaimed any knowledge of the slayings and claimed an alibi, which was supported by his wife.

Authorities indicated today the release of Herbert Smith, another man held for investigation, was imminent. Sheriff Wyman said he was convinced Smith had no connection with the crime.

Physicians announced today they probably would release Arlith Monroe, a ten-year-old daughter, from the hospital next Monday. The child was taken on the head with the nail studded club used to kill her parents and sister, but her condition is steadily improving.

LYDD GEORGE TO TAKE REST

LONDON, Sept. 22. Although Premier Lloyd George has virtually recovered from his recent illness, it is understood that he will not return to London until about October. Pending his return there will be no meeting of the entire cabinet.

The premier, however, is in close touch with his colleagues regarding such reply to Eamon de Valera and has personally consulted some of them. Consequently, he will be in position to communicate the considered reply to the whole government.

It is expected here tonight that Mr. de Valera will receive the premier's answer at the end of this week. In the beginning of next week, it is expected that the Irish situation will be in a more progressive state than it is at present.

Probe Secret War Stores At Oppau

PARIS, September 22.—French government chemists have begun an investigation at Oppau, Germany, where several hundred persons were killed by an explosion on Wednesday morning, to determine whether secret war stores and munitions had been clandestinely manufactured there, says a Mayence despatch to the Journal.

The inquiry has shown the explosion was due to the spontaneous decomposition of a new product—nitro sulphate of ammonia—from which wonders were expected as a fertilizing agent.

The manufacture of this salt has been going on in the plant of the Badische anilide plant at Oppau for the past five months, and considerable stocks of it had accumulated. It is declared by the despatch that this practice "appears to have been grossly imprudent" as ammonia compounds are most unstable and the properties of the new preparation are thus far poorly defined.

Deflagration of the nitro sulphate of ammonia is declared to have caused the explosion of other ammonia products, and that several gasometers, one of which was of 50,000 cubic meters capacity, let go. This large gasometer contained highly explosive fuel.

The plant also contained a quantity of liquid air in tubes, which added to the power of the explosion and would tend to explain the extent and exceptional character of the disaster.

PASS PATRIOTIC RESOLUTIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Resolutions endorsing the conference limitation of armament and favoring "the repatriation of the people of Ireland for a government of their own choosing" were adopted today at the closing session of the National Convention of the National Council of Catholic Men. During the day the delegates were received by President Harding at the White House.

The resolution of the armament conference while endorsing it, expressed the opinion that the United States should "see to it at all times sufficient means of protection are maintained to meet any purpose on the part of any government on earth to intimidate or neutralize the position of our government in the protection of its interests."

The resolution on Ireland expressed the hope for a satisfactory outcome of the present negotiations between the British government and the representatives of the Irish Government.

Rear Admiral Benson of Washington was elected national president.

British Woman Beats American

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. Miss Olga Leitch, British woman golf champion, today defeated Miss Alice Strickland in the Canadian championship tournament by 2 and 1.

CONDEMN KU KLUX KLAN
CINCINNATI, O., September 22.—Condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan is contained in a resolution adopted last night by U. S. Grant Camp, Sons of Veterans. Copies of the resolutions are to be sent to the commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans at the national meeting to be held in Indianapolis, Sunday and to the commander-in-chief of the grand army of the republic.

It is expected that the Irish situation will be in a more progressive state than it is at present.

Rheumatism Due To Waste Products In The Blood

For Genuine Relief Your Blood Must Be Purified

As the blood circulates it has two functions to perform. First: to carry nourishment to all parts of the body. Second: to take up the waste products and cast them out through the proper channels.
When waste products accumulate in the system, they are a menace to life. They cause a lowered vitality, many forms of skin disorders and rheumatism.

There is no disease more painful, nor a disease that will lead to as much serious trouble as rheumatism. Genuine relief can be had only by correcting the basic trouble—waste products.

Thousands and thousands of men and women during the past 50 years have cleared their blood of waste products with S. S. S. It is the ideal remedy for rheumatism, because it removes the poisonous waste matter which is causing the trouble. There are no bad after effects and the result is wonderful. Begin taking S. S. S. today and write for 50 page illustrated Booklet, "Facts about the Blood"—free.

Personal medical advice, without charge, may also be had by sending a complete description of your case. Address: Chief Medical Director, Swift Specific Co., 720 S. S. S. Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. All good drug stores sell S. S. S.—advertisement.

Akron Man Is Back On Job Feeling Fine

"I'll tell the world what I think about Tulahe. It's the best medicine ever made," said H. Ryan, 93 Lincoln St., Akron, Ohio.

"I ought to be strong for it, for I was almost down and out when I started taking it and now I'm in the top shape, feeling as fine as I ever did in my life. Rheumatism had got the best of me and my knees were twice their natural size. I was in such a bad fix I had to give up work and felt pretty miserable, as I needed my wages."

"Tulahe put me back on the job feeling fine and I never lost any time now from my work. I haven't a ache or a pain, either. Tulahe's great."

Farmers Are Cribbing Corn

Bottomland farmers are very busy these days cribbing their corn. They will not take any chances of having a frost in the Ohio river destroy their crop as it did two years ago. Corn cribbing is in order in all parts of the county.

Cancer of the Toe-Nail.

One of the rarest diseases known in cancer of the nail, only four cases being on record. The most recent one is described by Dr. Carlos Chagas of the medical college of Belo Horizonte, Brazil. It is that of a laborer, aged sixty, who had it on the nail of his right great toe. The toe was amputated and the man, apparently cured, disappeared. The toe was examined microscopically and confirmed the diagnosis.

Local Speakers On Program

McWilliams of Columbus taking the place of Rev. R. R. Reed of this city, and Dr. E. W. Hubert speaking in the place of Prof. E. M. Gentry. The other speakers were Rev. C. E. Chandler and George D. Selby, who brought messages from the people of Portsmouth to the colored population of the Peerless City.

Atonement? When William Butler Yeats was a boy, his family moved from Dublin to Bedford Park, as he relates in the Dial. Yeats says, incidentally, that he was not much of a churchgoer, but that he must have gone a few times because he remembers very clearly a wooden sign which hung in the church porch: "The congregation are requested to kneel during prayers; the kneelers are afterwards to be busy with their own minds."—Adverse Discount.

Baby Pearl Meyers
The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Meyers of 1214 Main street, Sedotville, was plunged into deepest sorrow Wednesday evening about ten o'clock when the final summons came to Pearl Meyers, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Meyers. The child who was been ill a few days with infantile paralysis.

Several months ago the little one was bitten by a cat and for several days was in a serious condition.

The bite was on one of her toes. She recovered from this and only several days ago was taken ill with the contagious disease which resulted in death.

Besides the grief-stricken parents a brother, William Jr., and a baby sister, Margaret, survive.

Miss Emma Francis Allen, daughter of James and Matilda Allen, was born September 17, 1866, and died September 19, 1921, aged 55 years and 2 days, at her home, 512 Broadway street.

On December 20, 1886, she was united in marriage to Andrew Arthur, who with four children, Mrs. M. I. McCham, Mrs. James Dillon, Bertha and Willie, at home, were left to mourn her death. Three children died in infancy. Mrs. William Warren, of Montum, is an only sister.

Most of Mrs. Arthur's life was spent near South Webster, the family moving to Portsmouth only a few months ings. In childhood she was a member of the United Brethren in Christ and since has lived a consistent Christian life. She was loved by all who knew her.

A true, loving mother, a kind neighbor, a loyal follower of Christ, has gone to her reward in the passing of Mrs. Arthur.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the local U. B. church, with Rev. E. H. Dudley in charge. Burial was in Greenlawn.

SOCIETY

One of the happiest occasions in the lives of the little tots of the Children's Home was the annual picnic dinner served there Thursday evening by the members of the Loyal Order of the First Christian Bible school.

When the fleet of eighteen automobiles parked at the beautiful building, the little kiddies gave out a mighty war-whoop and danced with glee as they saw the many baskets and the big ice cream freezer carried into the spacious dining hall. The little folks knew what was coming, for this kind of a treat on the part of the Bercans has been an annual occurrence for several years, and there has never been a time yet when they went away from the tables without being loaded to the gunnels. And last evening, even surpassed all other similar occasions, for it seemed as though the members of the class had tried to outdo each other in the preparation of viands. There was fried chicken, salad, great big layer cakes, in profusion, pies, baked beans, salads, ham, ice cream—50 millions and more, etc., etc.

All hands set to work arranging the big spread and at 8 o'clock, sharp, every tot in the home, to the number of 75, was ready for business. They were all seated at the first table, and for about thirty minutes there was not much doing in that spacious dining room but getting away with the food. And the children made a good job of it, but so heartily had the Bercans been in preparing for the affair that there was more than enough for the members of the class, numbering 75 adults and 25 children, to satisfy their enormous appetites. And despite the fact that Rev. Charles R. Oakley was there, likewise John Williams, F. W. Sheridan, Chester Kerr, Walter Adams, George Edwards, et al., there was plenty left. The Bercans never do things by halves.

Thanks to the courtesy of Superintendent G. W. Howes, the Bercans were shown through the Home—every department. Unless one makes an inspection he can little realize the completeness of the new building. It is was coming, for this kind of a treat on the part of the Bercans has been

The police rounded up a gang of East End youths and brought them into Juvenile court Friday for delinquency in connection with the stealing of water meters and pop from the store of A. G. The hearing which followed resulted in a finding of guilt against Ed Compliment, Arthur Galko, Orville Sanders, Glenn Shump, Eugene Arms and Frederick Compliment and Judge Gilliland after making the boys wards of the court required them to pay one dollar each for the property taken. Two other boys implicated in the thefts have been ordered to appear in court to explain.

The wife is now living at Jackson and the court was advised that she has adopted her child, born since the proceedings against the husband started, to a family in that city.

Before making the order the court urged the couple to cease their quarreling and adjust their difficulties for the sake of their children.

Sheppard, she complains that Hill has cursed and called her vile names and threatens that he struck her over the right eye last Monday, making a wound, besides, she asserts he has assaulted and beat her at other times. She says that his conduct toward her is without just cause and claims that she can no longer live with him and stand his mistreatment.

Granted a Divorce—Maurice J. Caldwell, former county treasurer and now a prominent farmer and stock raiser of Valley township, was granted a divorce by Judge Thomas in Common Pleas court Friday, divorcing him from Beatrice Caldwell. They were married in September, 1901, and the divorce, which was granted on the grounds of neglect, gives the plaintiff the custody of their two minor sons. The couple have been separated since last February, when the evidence, disclosed, the wife became dissatisfied with life on the farm and left, going to Columbus, where she is now living. PRESIDENT'S
ARE RECORDED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—President Harding "submitted" to having his finger prints taken today during a call at the White House by delegates to the annual convention here of the International Association for Identifi-fication. The delegates, including many internationally known detectives and criminologists, explained briefly to the President the methods and advantages of the finger print identification and their invitation to have his "prints" made was accepted.

AIR SERVICE IMPROVEMENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—A further attempt to place the army air service on a more satisfactory basis will be made when Colonel Mason M. Patrick, appointed to succeed Major General Member as chief of the service, takes office, probably next week. It is an open secret that Secretary Weeks has not been satisfied with conditions in the flying corps and he indicated today that he would take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the departure of General Member to return to the command of field troops to effect the changes he has in mind.

Mr. Weeks laid stress on the fact that Colonel Patrick was an officer of mature years and seasoned by experience at home and abroad in positions requiring executive ability. He also indicated that in the future the functions of the assistant chief and director of operations, Brigadier General William Mitchell, would be more narrowly confined than in the past to training and preparation of flying personnel.

For the larger task of building up the ground service of the corps, which includes procurement of aircraft and the supervision of the expenditure of some $20,000,000 the war secretary indicated that he regarded Colonel Patrick peculiarly well fitted. The airman have a natural voice in questions of the types of equipment they are to operate, he said, and their practical experience is not to be disregarded, but details of this and like nature will be worked out, Mr. Weeks expects, in conferences between the two chiefs.

Charges Are Withdrawn

When the cases of Dewey Russell, 23, of 1142 Twelfth street and Louis Purgin, Italian confecturer, charged with assault and battery, were called for trial in Municipal court Friday both joined in a request for dismissal of the complaints, explaining they had amicably settled their difficulty and that they did not desire to press the charges further. Judge Sprague granted the request after receiving assurance there would be no recurrence of hostilities. The charges grew out of a fight which occurred at Purgin's store on Twelfth street Monday evening after the men became involved in a quarrel over the claim that Purgin had choked Russell's younger brother. During the encounter Purgin was knocked through a plate glass and was severely cut about the head by falling glass.

McGannon murder trials, perjured himself at the first trial, and that consequently former Judge W. H. McGannon and A. A. Cartwright, his junior counsel, committed no offense in endeavoring to have her change her testimony in the second trial, were being made today by defense attorneys in the McGannon contempt of court trial being heard before Judge R. H. Day of Canton.

The state rested its case late yesterday. Immediately counsel for Cartwright moved that the case against his client be dismissed, claiming that, even had Cartwright known of efforts to change Miss Neely's testimony, he was not bound to do so because of the sacredness of relations between client and attorney. The motion was overruled, Judge Day declaring that there was not sufficient evidence of an conspiracy to warrant dismissal of Cartwright.

"All politicians of all nations represented in the coming conference are going into that conference without any sincere interest of doing anything."

"They hope only to use the conference for a ground of jockeying for national advantage."

The speaker was Will Irwin, famous war correspondent, writer, student of international relations, whose book, "The Next War," has been called "The Uncle Tom's Cabin" that shall shock the paralyzed conscience of man to activity, that war shall cease."

"There is no question in my mind," continued Irwin, looking out over peaceful Scituate Harbor from the piazza of his summer home, "that the common people want no more war. They want peace at any price. They are sick of disarmament conversations. They are sick of this military business which is causing them taxes and other burdens."

"People of England, France, Germany, Italy, the United States—all countries I know—can attribute the trouble about disarmament to the politician class. The business of politicians is largely promoted by excessive nationalism and chauvinism."

"This was shown plainly at the peace conference, regarding the League of Nations."

Senators' Position

"The attitude of the politician class is shown by the fact that the proposition for a disarmament conference was passed by the Senate by a unanimous vote, although among the senators are many who do not want disarmament."

"The hope of the disarmament conference is this: The politicians want to do something they consider popular. If they are persuaded the people want disarmament, there is hope."

"I have been surprised at the strength of the disarmament sentiment, which might be called almost a pacifist sentiment."

"If between now and the conference we can crystallize sentiment into some sort of action, we can force the politicians."

"If we do not force them, I believe that we'll see bankruptcy of several nations or a war to which the last was by comparison a mere skirmish."

McGannon On The Stand

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 23.—William H. McGannon, former chief justice of the municipal court, on trial for contempt of court in connection with his two trials for the murder of Harold C. Kazy, of which charge he was acquitted, took the witness stand in his own behalf today to tell for the fifth time in court his story of the happenings on the night Kazy was murdered.

He repeated almost word for word the story that resulted in his acquittal of the murder charge.

He swore again that he left John Joyce and Kazy in his own automobile at East Ninth street and Euclid avenue and walked to the public square where he boarded a street car for his home.

How'll We Use Our Factories?

Even Normalcy Cannot Absorb Capacity Output of Expanded Plants

BY ALBERT APPLE

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 22.—What is America going to do with its increased productive capacity—the excess factories and equipment built during the war?

This is the biggest problem facing business men according to leaders in the steel industry.

Pessimists point out that the steel industry is operating at an average of only 25 per cent of capacity.

Optimists answer: "Steel production at 25 per cent capacity is 50 per cent of normal or pre-war production."

The difference? Steel increased its productive capacity 11 per cent during the war.

Has the steel market's ability to consume steel increased 11 per cent? No, say the steel leaders.

Common Problem

The value of all manufactured American products in 1919, according to the last census, was $62,000,000,000 compared with $12,000,000,000 in 1914.

A lot of the 1919 gain in value was due to high prices.

Even making allowances for that, consumers figure that volume of output exceeds themselves increased between 1914 and 40 per cent more than in 1919.

It also means that factory and mill equipment is 20 to 40 per cent greater now than before the war.

Higher Living Standard

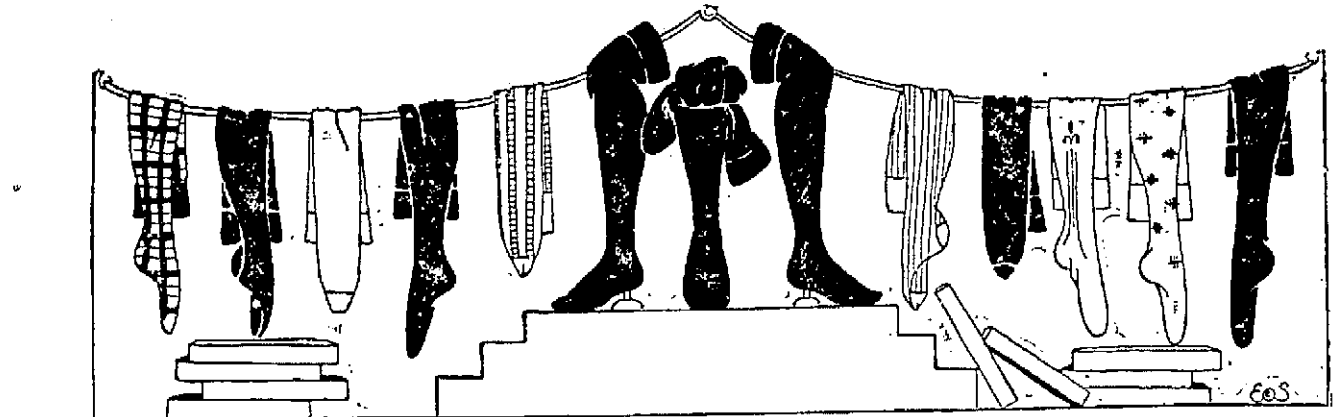

The wise men of the steel industry say there are two ways in which the nation's increased productive capacity may be kept busy.

ONE: By increasing the tonnage of our exports far above normal. Such a development is inadvisable.

TWO: Increase the amount of goods consumed within the United States.

The second alternative will be made possible by low prices. Example: The Ford Motor Co. The world means a tremendous raising of the standard of living.

The largest known egg is that of the extinct elephant bird of Madagascar, its contents being about two gallons.

Gun Case Taken Under Advisement

Deputy Marshals John Henry and Jay McCordick of New Boston last night arrested L. M. Upton, who was "sporting" an officers badge and a revolver. He was arrested on a charge of impersonating an officer.

This morning Judge A. Z. Blair appeared before Mayor Davis on behalf of Upton and explained that the man was employed as watchman at the steel plant, but had not been told to carry a gun as he had not been sworn in. Mayor Davis took the case under advisement and dismissed Upton for the present.

Vienna Coming Back Strong

BY HILTON BRONNER

VIENNA.—Vienna has been described as a vast metropolis in which desolation reigns.

Well, that is not Vienna!

By day there is an animated air about the beautiful city. By night the terrace restaurants on the wide boulevards are crowded with people sipping coffee or eating ices. And the shops, especially the ones that deal in luxury articles, are well stocked.

Worst Is Passed

Though there is still much unemployment in Vienna, much begging on the streets and much bitter poverty, which American relief organizations are striving to alleviate, the Viennese think the worst is over.

It is not only that the League of Nations is undertaking a scheme to help disarmed states, but that business men are beginning to feel that Vienna has not been hit as absolutely crushing blow by the peace treaties which carved the once mighty Austria-Hungarian empire up and left Austria a small state with one-third its population in the capital.

Vienna's Importance

Captains of commerce and finance in Vienna believe their city is destined to remain the most important place in southeastern Europe, not only because the streams of trade naturally flow there and meet, but because of the effective commercial and financial organization built up in Vienna, with branches in all the new states.

Experiences in the past few months has shown that buyers from the Balkan states still prefer to come to Vienna to make purchases.

This is due to the fact that Vienna offers wider attractions, has better hotels and amusements and in German has a language that most of the buyers understand.

I.—The Amateur Adventurer

YOU get very few things in this world unless you go after them. This is as true of adventures as of any other desirable matter; and when a man is as bored by his existence as Morley Smith was, it is not strange that he should seek adventure.

As he sat in his easy-chair at his club—a most highly respectable and gloomy club—his life seemed to him about as tame and colorless as possible. He was close to fifty years old, a bachelor, and with enough money to do what he wished. For something like eight years he had been sustained by an ambition. He lived at the club, finding that the most comfortable mode of life, and for eight years he had planned and mildly schemed to become the tenant of Room 45, the most desirable room in the club. It was high in the air, so that one was not awakened by early street noises; it was flooded by the morning sun in winter; it overlooked the small roof-garden next door, from which on pleasant evenings during the warm period very good music sounded.

Every resident member of the club coveted Room 45 and made plans to capture it when old Jason Birch gave it up. Everyone knew old Jason Birch would not give it up until he died. For eight years, therefore, Morley Smith had had a real object in life; but now Jason Birch was dead, and Morley Smith was domiciled in Room 45, and he felt that life had temporarily lost its savor. When a man's one great ambition is achieved, he feels lost.

Morley Smith may be described, beginning at the ground, as the neatest shaven (which he called boots), the best-fitting spuds and the most beautiful trousers in New York. He was an adept at saying "Oh! I say, old chap!" Once a month he looked at his envelope of club checks and hoped the club bookkeeper had totted the beastly things up correctly. What? Regularly once a month he took his pocket check-book and the bank's statement to the cashier of the Ancient National Bank and said: "Tot this up for me, old chap, will you? I can't make the beastly affair balance!" There was always several thousand dollars balance to his credit; so it did not matter much whether it balanced or not.

He did not spend all his time in the club. He knew many people. Fifth Avenue and the adjacent streets were spotted with doors that gladly opened to him, and he was continually being drawn to some elegant country place on Long Island or elsewhere. He endured all this with proper resignation, but he was tremendously bored by it all. The club bored him; life bored him.

When the chaplains began to come into the club wearing their khaki-colored uniforms, his life bored him more than ever. They, lucky lads, were going to have a taste of what was doing, and they showed it in their faces and in their manner. They were brisk and business-like, even in the club. They spoke audibly and as if they no longer feared the draperies. Morley Smith, sitting in the red-leather chair and saying, "I say, waiter, a brandy and soda, what?" felt tremendously out of it. He wished he was one of the lads and hooked up to this war thing somehow; and he would have been, but for certain infirmities that did not show on the surface.

The men in the club were not all like Morley Smith. There may have been a dozen more or less like him, but he was the true fine flower of clubdom. He was a clubman. Every proper club has him, in varying numbers. He does not know anything about anything worth knowing. He has a store of entirely incorrect information, picked at random. "Hedgehogs? Yes, I know them; they're the woolly beggars with the long tails." Or "Roumania? One of those little countries they carved out of Poland, you know. They keep their women in harems—what?" For many years, being a clubman was a thoroughly complete occupation. A man might be a banker or a poet or a clubman. It was a respected and respectable occupation.

Suddenly, with the war, being a clubman became nothing at all. The banker began financing for the Government or selling bonds for the Government. The poet began writing patriotic verse. For the genuine clubman there was nothing. You jolly well can't be a professional clubman in a manner noticeably to assist the Government. To sip a rickety and say "I say! the Hunns are a rotten lot, what?" doesn't hit very deep when the younger chaps are actually wearing the khaki color and the banker member is just dropping in for a moment between momentous conferences having to do with billions of dollars or hundreds of thousands of tons. One gets pushed to one side and feels lonely.

Morley Smith stood this as long as he could. Once or twice he said to a banker member, "I say, old chap, if you see a chance to work me into this some way—" and was met with an "I'll remember it, Smith," which meant Smith would be the last man to be asked to take part in the big work on hand, and after standing on the edge of a group for a few minutes with his glass in his hand, Morley Smith would go back to the red easy-chair and sip in silence.

It became intolerable. His life seemed as colorless as a bit of water-saturated paper drifting aimlessly in a vast ocean, and it was while he was feeling thus that he picked up a book and began to read one of the short stories it contained. He was an extremely deliberate reader. He often spent several months over a short popular novel, but the impressions made on him by what he read were for that reason tremendously deep. He invariably declared that what he was reading was "beastly rot," that being a safe attitude for criticism to take; but he was in no way competent to judge whether a book was trash or not, and he accepted as deep philosophy some of the flimsiest weavings of the most trivial fictionists. The short stories in the book he happened to pick up were neither trash nor trivial, although they were the most absolute fiction, and Morley Smith devoured them as thoroughly and as slowly as an inchworm devours a leaf.

They were stories of adventure, true Arabian Nights, but the background was the city Morley Smith knew best—New York. It was as if the stories had thrown open a huge door that Morley Smith had not known existed. One walked through that door into a realm of adventure such as Morley Smith had not imagined possible in New York. Behind every door, the author told Morley Smith, adventure waited for the coming of the adventurer, and he proved it by giving instances that became short stories of such interest that Morley Smith forgot to sip his drink as he read. Behind every door! You merely picked out the door and tapped on it, and the door opened, and the adventure was there!

Morley Smith finished the book and looked up at the familiar surroundings of the lounge-room of the club. A great city teeming with adventure, and no sitting here in this deadly, boring hole, dying of slow ennui! I say—what? He felt in his breast-pocket for his purse, opened it and assured himself that there were enough twenties among the smaller bills to see him through any reasonable adventure, replaced the purse and tapped the bell for a final drink. He drank with a sense of pleasant excitement, made sure he had a couple of clean handkerchiefs in his pocket (he never went out without taking that precaution) and walked out to the coatroom.

Arthur held the comfortable, fur-lined coat as Morley Smith slipped his arms into it. He crunched the ten-dollar hat with a soft brush before he handed it to Morley Smith with a "Thank you!" that was either in gratitude for the amount Morley Smith had entered against his name on the Christmas gratuity-sheet or for what Morley Smith was expected to sign this coming Christmas. To the doorman who opened the door of the taxicab standing before the club, Morley Smith mentioned a street and number.

The street and number he had chosen at random, in the manner of true adventurers, and before they reached it, he saw the driver reaching the house numbers. They drew up before a church.

"I think this is it, sir," said the driver doubtfully.

Morley Smith looked at the church. It was an entirely respectable and solidate church, dark as to windows and evidently looked and looked, as churches are for five nights in the week.

"I say, you know," said Morley Smith, "is this East or West?"

"East—You said East."

"It can't be this," said Morley Smith. "It must have been West. Try the same number West, my man."

The driver wheeled the taxicab and bumped toward the West. When he had crossed Fifth Avenue, he looked back into the cab as if wondering whether his passenger was quite sober, but the lights from the lamps showed that Morley Smith was entirely sober. He was sitting erect, scanning the buildings as they passed by them. The taxicab stopped before a plain, old-fashioned flat-building, one of a long row. Morley Smith opened the door and stepped out.

"Charge it to the club," the amateur adventurer felt a comforting sense of safety as he heard the driver. It dealt him at the end of this adventure, he would not have disappeared utterly. The driver would report. A fresh sense of caution came with this thought. "Yes," he said, "And I say, chauffeur! Come back for me in two hours. Will you? I'm going in here!" he pointed to the door of the flat— "and when I come out, I'll wait in the restaurant, yonder. If I'm not there at nine o'clock, tell the police, will you? Thanks. This is for you." The flat-building was divided in the middle by a wall. Morley Smith could see this through the panes of beveled glass in the doors. He pushed the doors open and entered. He found himself, on the street-level, in a small vestibule with walls tiled below and whitewashed above, and set in the tiles were two rows of letter-boxes, each with a push button. In the small slots above the letter-boxes were names. Some were cut from visiting cards and some were written. Morley Smith examined them all—Hussey, Casey, Williams and so on—and pushed the button below the box that proclaimed itself the temporary property of P. X. Casey. There was a mysterious clicking in the lock of the door that separated the vestibule from the hall, and Morley Smith opened the door and walked in. The clicking continued. He knew enough about flats to know this was an invitation to enter.

The hall was not at all inviting to one who was accustomed to the dull elegance of wealthy town and country houses. There was a strong, warm odor of cooking foods, a mingling of various odors, not pleasant to a man who had dined, as Morley Smith had, on a most excellent dinner. He hesitated, but he had been expected. The figured carpet on the stairs was worn to the warp on the edges of the treads. The cheap natural oak railings were in need of varnish, and the single gas jet flared at its corner. Morley Smith looked up at the door and saw a sign that read "MRS. CASEY'S FLAT."

He mounted the stairs. He mounted slowly, so as not to lose his breath. As he neared the third floor, he saw more light, for a door was ajar; and as he raised his head to the level of the landing, he saw a woman standing in the doorway, awaiting him.

"Oh, excuse me!" she said, although she had done nothing to call for excusing. "I thought it was Frank."

The amateur adventurer was before the door now. He removed his hat. "No," he said. "My name is Smith. I have a card here somewhere. May I come in?"

"I suppose you want to see Frank? You are the insurance man?"

"No, really! No, nothing like that! Quite another matter, I assure you."

She took the card and read the name.

"Well, I expect Frank any minute," she said. "He ought to be here now. You can come into the parlor and wait. If you want to, I'm getting dinner, and it will burn if I don't attend to it."

She hurried ahead of him and he followed her into the parlor. It was quite plain, furniture that pretended to be carved but that was really cut out of flat-boards—installment stuff, very evidently—all cheap. It was beginning to show wear, too. The plush was going the inevitable way of all cheap plush. The rug was going the way of all cheap rugs.

"That's the most comfortable chair," said Mrs. Casey. "I think Frank will be here in a minute. Sometimes he is a little late when he stops in my something extra for supper—mean dinner. I'm from the West, and I never get over saying 'supper.' Out there we had dinner in the middle of the day, you know."

"Really?" said the adventurer. "Everyone does," said Mrs. Casey. "You had better take off your coat or you will be cold when you go out."

"Ah—may I ask what—ah—your husband's occupation may be?" asked the amateur adventurer. He was really having quite a thrill of excitement. He Morley Smith was actually in a strange flat where he had no business whatever to be, talking to a fair-faced young man, from whose saucy eyes denied her sedate manner, and the husband was due at any minute. It is true that there was nothing in the young woman's manner to suggest that she feared her husband would rush into the flat in a drunken frenzy and throttle her unless the visitor prevented him, but it was adventure none the less. Already Morley had learned that in the West dinner is called supper and is had in the middle of the day. I say, what?

"Well, I guess maybe Frank had better tell you all that himself," said Mrs. Casey, answering Morley Smith's last query. "I always think a woman should not mix into things like that. So just make yourself comfortable. I'll have to look after my dinner."

She went as far as the door. "I'll just close that door and you don't mind," she said. "I'm cooking chops, and the smoke is something behind him, the man looked up to the very window where Morley Smith stood and waved a hand.

The adventurer stepped back and moved softly to his chair. Suddenly he had an overwhelming feeling that he was not at all an adventurer probing the mysteries of a modern flatland, but a silly and senseless intruder into the privacy of a very ordinary home. He felt, at that moment, and for a considerable time after a perfect liar. There was an ordinary young wife frying pork chops, and an ordinary young husband bringing home additional provender, a paper bag, and the Morley Smith, sitting in the parlor without the slightest excuse to give the husband for being there.

Morley Smith felt, deeply and painfully, the difference between the sort of chaps an author reads of in adventures and himself. One of those chaps would have a lot of things to say, don't you know? The things the chap would say would make it all right—make an adventure of it. Morley Smith realized suddenly that, by Jove, he didn't have a thing to say, what? This chap would come up the stairs and open the door and see him and say, "Well, what is it?" and Morley Smith would not know what it was, or how to say it was not anything. He would look a perfect fool, what? I say, you know. It was a silly business!

He heard the bell ring in the kitchen in answer to the husband's touch on the bottom bell, and he imagined the answering click in the lock of the entrance door downstairs. He walked to the door that led to the outer hall. It was locked! He might have escaped that way. He heard Mrs. Casey walking to the other door—the door from the narrow hall into the outer hall—and he fled back to his chair.

"Hello, Toots!" he heard the husband hail the wife. "Late, but I brought you something. How's her kiddies?"

He heard the kiss. "I smell something good!" he heard the husband say, and then he did not quite hear what the wife said, but he knew it was warm, that a man was in the parlor. "That's all right," said the husband. "Take these packages, will you?"

With all his heart Morley Smith wished he was. He wished he could say he was. He regretted that he had not truly denied to Mrs. Casey that he was from the insurance company. He felt, more than ever, that he was not cut out to be a modern adventurer. A writer-chap would have said to Mrs. Casey, "That may be, or that may not be, or something of the sort, don't you see? A writer-chap would have been up to that sort of thing."

"I say! No, I'm not from an insurance company," said the adventurer.

Mrs. Casey seemed disappointed. "You're not from the car company, are you?" she asked, as if this was previously unmentioned. It was Morley Smith's opportunity.

"That may be, or that may not be," he said noncommittally.

"Well, you ought to know," said Mrs. Casey with a slight laugh. "I don't if you don't."

He became more gracious. He became actually friendly. "It may as well tell you right now," he said, "that there is nothing to see on my leg."

"Really?" said Morley Smith. He began to feel safer around. For some unknown reason the young Mr. Casey and he seemed to be changing places. He felt, instead of being reserved and suspicious, the young man was becoming friendly and open.

"There may be a little black-and-blue left," said Mr. Casey, "but you can't expect a bruise to show forever."

"Quite so!" said Morley Smith. "That would be nonsense, what?" "Anyway, if you wanted to see the bruises, you ought to have come sooner," said Mr. Casey. "The insurance doctor saw them all right. And this limp it gave me—I don't know when I will get rid of this limp."

"Oh! I say!" said Morley Smith, not knowing what else to say. "Now, you don't need to come any of that," said Mr. Casey angrily. "I ain't claiming you lamed me for life, or anything like that, but I've got case enough to sue on and to get big damages, too. Any jury—and a street car corporation don't stand half a chance. I mean, a man gets his rights from a jury."

"My good man," Morley Smith began rather patronizingly, "you—"

"All right, then," said Mr. Casey, "I'll sue! I thought you had come up here to settle this business like one man with another, and I was ready to do the fair thing with you, but—"

He stopped short, in making a movement, Morley Smith had disarranged his coat so that the luxurious fur lining was exposed, and Mr. Casey's eye dwelt on it.

"Now I know who you are!" he said abruptly. "I call it sneaky, I do, coming up here this way. Well, I've got your name now, and my witnesses will know you when I get you into court. They'll identify you, easy enough. One—two of them said you were driving that insufferable auto of yours the way no man ought to drive. When your car knocked me in front of the street car—"

Mr. Casey stopped short again. There was a blank look on the face of his visitor. As a matter of fact, the adventurer was trying to piece things together, to weave some sort of sense out of the tangle of words Mr. Casey had thrown at him. For a minute he had felt safe—Casey thought he had come to adjust some claim Casey had against a trolley company. Now the adventurer was all at sea again. His brain would not cope with this new complication. He was willing to be some one, anyone—if he could get out of this mess, but without seeming ridiculous, for this man would not let him be anyone for more than a minute at a time. Then he wanted him to be some one else. Mr. Casey, on his side, saw the mystification in Morley Smith's face. He hesitated. He was worried. He could not decide whether Morley Smith had come to settle for the trolley company or to settle as the owner of the automobile. He had not expected either. In his heart he knew he had had no business to be crossing the street in the middle of the night. The automobile's fender had knocked him and had sent him into the fender of the street car. The fender had rolled him to the street. He had been bruised—no doubt of that—but until he saw this well-fed, well-dressed gentleman in his parlor he had not thought of getting any damages from anyone. He had considered himself lucky in being assured that the insurance company would allow him twenty-five dollars for the time he had remained at home. Now he mistooked his lips and stared at Morley Smith, trying to decide what to say next.

"Oh, we would be pleased," said Mrs. Casey.

"Sure! If you don't mind taking what we've got," said Mr. Casey. Morley Smith felt a new thrill of excitement. The adventure was advancing after all! Why, by Jove, he was getting along as well as one of those writer-chaps would have got along! I say, what? That book-fellow was all right, what?

As he ate his dinner (and the chops were not dried to chips), Morley Smith felt that the adventure was better than an extra dividend. He would not have missed the adventure for a thousand dollars. A bit of class, coming into a chap's home and being fed and all that when nobody knew him from Adam! The adventure was not, to be sure, as thrilling as some he had read in the book, but he was glad it was real. Later adventures, on other evenings, might be thrilling, but Morley Smith was satisfied to begin thus and work up to murder, abduction and the rest.

Mrs. Casey was a nice little hostess. She talked enough, but she talked more of her husband than of other persons or things. It came out that he was a salesperson—shows at a big shop. It came out that one reason he had had the accident was that her birthday had come around and he had hurried across the street to buy a set of furs he had seen in a window—muff and stole and dress complete.

"They were just elegant!" she said enthusiastically. "I saw them myself."

"I say!" exclaimed Mr. Morley Smith. "Fifteen dollars, what?" His coat had cost eight hundred.

"Well, Frank could afford it," said Mrs. Casey, defending her extravagant husband. "We're not quite paupers. And my birthday only comes once a year."

"Really!" said the adventurer, and then he felt he had said something silly. Birthdays do only come once a year, you know. He also felt ashamed. He felt as a man feels who opens a drawer and finds what he has no right to see.

"The worst of it was," said Mr. Casey, "I didn't get them, after all. I'm going to let her have them for Christmas, just the same! If I get my money—"

Morley Smith tried with his fork. One of the paper bags had contained chocolate rusks.

"I say!" he said suddenly. He looked from Mrs. Casey to her husband, his eyes bright with a big idea.

"Lost?" queried Mr. Casey. "You were going on a bit about settling with me. Back then in the parlor, you know. Cracking ideas. That! Do away with suits and jackets and all that sort of thing, what? Really, suitcases, those lawyer-chaps. Suppose I buy the lady a birthday present, what? You know, what? I mean, old chap—let you buy it, and all that. When we settle up the damages right now?"

He drew his purse from his inside pocket and placed it on the table. Mr. Casey moved his chair back a little.

"Now, I'm willing to do the fair thing," he began.

He stopped, from the purse his visitor was taking twenty-dollar bills—one, two, three—six, seven, eight! Nine! Ten! Morley Smith felt in the purse, but there were no more twenties. He slid the pile to Mr. Casey.

"What do you say?" he asked. "Mr. Casey would have fought before he would have accepted less than twenty-five dollars. Any accident ought to be worth that. He took the two hundred dollars in his hand.

"Fair and liberal, I call it—don't you, Toots?"

"But we can't possibly spend all that for furs."

Morley Smith put his purse back in his pocket, buttoned his coat and rose.

"A bit of it, though," he said firmly. "You'll see to that, what?" he asked Casey. "Well, thanks! I'll be bothering along. Jolly nice time I've had."

"We're ever so much obliged to you," said Mrs. Casey, giving him her hand.

"Yes, thanks," said Casey, and he shook hands warmly.

The amateur adventurer went out into the hall and down the stairs and out into the crisp, cool night. He felt uplifted, elated. He saw his taxicab waiting and hailed it and drove to the club. He had had the most glorious evening of his life.

Upstairs Mrs. Casey danced around the table and hugged Frank A. Casey ecstatically.

"Isn't it great?" she cried. "Two hundred dollars, Frank!"

Casey folded the bills and handed them to her.

"It's yours, kid," he said. "But, believe me!"

"What?"

"That's one guy that won't hold his job long! I can see his flash. He did not even ask me to sign a release. I can see him trotting back in a sweat to get me to sign before the night is over. You watch!"

But they never saw him again. Morley Smith was sitting in the Club, opposite old Fanning Granger.

"So, you say, old chap," he was saying, "that there's a lot of bally rot about these spy chaps. No trick at all, their job. Any brash chap can get into any place if he puts his mind to it. I say, waiter, two brandy and sodas, what?"

He was extremely and blessedly content with himself and the club and the whole world. He had adventured.

INDIANS WIN
BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Cleveland won from Boston 9 to 8 in 12 innings Thursday, thus virtually keeping pace with New York in the battle for first place. The Indians won on O'Neill's long double to right center, Finch Hitter Speaker's infield out and Jameson's fast bouncer which Scott could not field in time. Speaker nearly collapsed in running out his roller to Pratt.

Southworth's poor fielding of bunts, Sewell's miff of an easy fly which allowed two runs to score and a break three base hit by Walters which Smith lost in the sun, were the leading factors in the Boston scoring. Russell and Thormahlen were wild, but the box work of Myers for the Red Sox and Morton and Caldwell for Cleveland was excellent. It was Morton's second victory in two days.

GIANTS VIRTUALLY CINCH PENNANT

NEW YORK, September 23.—While the issue who's for first place remains unsettled in the American League that in the National League appears a trifle nearer solution than it has been.

The New York Nationals with their lead of 26 points over Pittsburgh, have the pennant almost within their grasp. With the outsiders still yesterday, the Pirates lost a point in their percentage games by breaking even in a double-header with Brooklyn. Providing the Giants win three of their remaining games they will finish the season with 91 victories and 60 defeats and to better this mark, the Pennsylvanians must win all nine games remaining on their schedule. If New York wins four, then Pittsburgh must win nine straight games to tie.

The Cubs left the home run hitting to two team mates, Quinn and Wind, in the Yankees' victory over Detroit yesterday. Besides his homer, Ward made two triples in three times at bat and scored three runs. Ruth, up five times, went hitless.

George Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns, won the second game of a double-header against Philadelphia with his eleventh "take four" hit of the season. The Browns who also won
